

the gone gnomin' philosophy

gone gnomin' in this season means to honor the circle of life, and my place within it, and to care deeply for the spaces i occupy while i am here in this body.

it means feeling, not always seeing, never taking life too seriously and recognizing every moment as an adventure.

it means unplugging from the machine, from the woven dream, and awaking to the magic that exists within and all around.

it means joy, and good food, and quiet moments.

it means compassion, patience, and curiosity.

it means knowing no limits to what this life can teach me.

for me, gnomes are a reminder to engage with life, with creatures other than myself, with the changing seasons and the living world that i am a part of. to see all things connected, all linked together.

gnomes are a reminder that big magic can exist in very small beings.

as a small being myself, i suppose i really dig that.
